RMHC Volunteer

When Ronald McDonald House Charities of the Southwest added their new House and Therapy Dog to their staff- they knew it would be a challenge, but an awesome service to their guest families. His addition to the Ronald McDonald House adds comfort and a sense of normalcy to their new “home away from home”. He’s truly become the Chief Cheer Officer for the organization.

Sheri Anderson is a long time Lubbock native and founder of That’s a Good Dog canine training services. When asked if Sheri would help the staff of Ronald McDonald House Charities to grow and implement this progressive way of comforting families of critically ill or injured children, her passion of dogs and helping those in need came together.

Sheri has worked with several employees at the Ronald McDonald House with canine companion skills so Jax can have multiple handlers. He interacts and comforts children and families by playing fetch, reading books, or engaging in a fun game of “find it”.

Jax especially enjoys going to the hospital and making bedside visits with children. Sometimes he lays quietly on their bed as they receive their chemotherapy treatments, and sometimes he walks with them down the hospital hallway literally helping them to get on the path of healing.

Thanks to Sheri’s passion and her willingness to pour countless hours of training, love, and support into our House Dog program, Jax now travels across the nation helping to establish a certified House Dog program with other Ronald McDonald Houses.
